The present season is the most favourable for securing a rapid

WESLEYAN MISSIONS.

The Protestant Hall was the scene of a very large gathering last night, attracted thither by the announcement that a sermon would be delivered by the Rev. William K. Ely, D.D., on the subject of "Wesleyan Missions in the South Seas, and their claims." The subject was well chosen, and the hall was crowded to the doors, among the gentlemen present on the platform were the Revs. George Martin (President of the Wesleyan Conference), J. H. Breckinridge (of Newington College), G. H. Briggs, and J. H. Smith.

Chas. L. Lane, H. Mack, and Messrs. W. Hemmick, L. A. E. Vickery, G. W. Barker, J. Hardy, B. James, and J. W. H. Jones, were the lay members.

The sermon, a most elevational service, conducted by the Rev. J. H. Ely, was well attended. Mr. Allen briefly introduced the lecturer. Dr. Ely, after stating that the subject was "Wesleyan Missions in the South Seas, and their claims," said that the object, to make a special appeal in the initiation of a movement to supply a lack and to give impetus to the Wesleyan movement in the South Seas, was to be the Australian Wesleyan Church. The cause of Christian missions was one which might well claim the attention of the people of this country, and the speaker dwelt on the splendour of its achievements, present a series of examples which could not but attract attention.

Mr. Ely was now new to the audience, and the novelty of the subject was one of the elements of what had been achieved there was at once the best argument for their necessity the highest ambition which could be conceived, and the sympathy of every heart. The islands of the South Sea are spots where all that is devilish reigned with undisturbed sway; where scenes of cruelty were daily enacted which it is difficult to describe. The natives were divided into two into groups, the widows were strangled, and where, to satisfy a brutal appetite, cannibalism spread its terrible net in open day. Science heard the cry for deliverance, and the world had heard of the islands of the South Sea, and no nation failed to deal with a disease like that. But for the honour of the Christian Church and the glory of the Father there came a response until the world's heart beat to a new hope until the world's heart beat to a new hope.

Their was no holiday task who went forth to the islands of the South Sea. The history will never be dition to tell the tale of all that was so nobly attempted and so nobly accomplished. These men were made of the same stuff as the heroes of olden times, as the Carrys of India, Knull of China, Moffat and Livingstone of Africa. Great as these, and many others who might be named, who braved the rage of oceans and the savagery of cruel men, he made bold to champion to-night, men whom white men despised, and whom the world was the moral grandeur of the enterprise which, in spite of all that would curb their courage, kept them firm to the work they had undertaken. If they applauded the heroism of the soldier and the bravery and endurance of the explorer, they would also cheer the white men who were still suffering women who went to the haunts of all that was horrible to lift the wretched denizens from the gates of hell to the life of God. While their missions had been productive of inestimable benefit in the spiritual and moral ended with results of a profitable nature to men who adum value anything which does not savour of material vacuance and profit. On this ground, too, had they reason to be proud of their South Sea missions. Look, for instance, at the progress of the Wesleyan mission in New Zealand, and the country brought into a state of civilization and good government of which no State need be ashamed. It stands in the sisterhood of nations with a king whose royalty of character would adorn any monarchy, and whose laws and feelings would beget the respect of all monarchs. The glorious flag of England now waves, as the result of missionary enterprise and endurance. They could gather from the records of the custom house, and, if permitted, from the ledgers of the merchants, to show the value of the manufactures of England, and the extent of her colonies. They had not to say that Christianity would not effect such wonderful changes in the habits and number of people to whom it was sent; but, standing on the high ground of experience, they point to what has happened in the past, and say that the same thing would unfortunately stop here. It has created in the breasts of leaders a yearning to become missionaries themselves to a people of other tribes and other natives—a proof of their generosity and sincerity, which the most incredulous must not doubt. The Rev. George Brown, who, at the request of Elias, who, at their own earnest request, was accepted by the Rev. George Brown to accompany his missionaries to the people of New Britain, and who, though assailed both by fever and by the clubs of savages, dog, firm, and showed that, like his brethren, he was not a coward, and that he did not shrink from the most arduous duty. He had intended to read some statistics, but as the time had considerably advanced, and statistics were generally looked upon as dry matter, he would ask them to

to, had estimated that, having in view the opening of fresh fields of work they could afford this society a further aid beyond £750 for the present year, which is £750 less than they allowed for the year which was then coming. The Australian Churches must take upon themselves the whole burthen and responsibility of the South Sea missions. They were desirous of sending a third missionary to New Britain, and he was happy to be able to say, as they would be to hear, that in response to an appeal made to them, they had agreed to send forward and offered himself for that arduous work. The Methodist Church in New Zealand was well able to do the work committed to it, and he appealed to them on the ground of sympathy with Christ for their increased interest in, and an energetic support of, the work of the Society. He said that he did not do all that he could for the Society, but he did all that he could for his duty to Christ and the honour of their Church.

nauds, as well as fidelity to the obligations furnished by the heroic examples of men, not of their own Church alone, but of all the Churches, everywhere, in all parts of the world, connected with missionary enterprise. In all parts of the world, India, China, and Polynesia, and, rising into forgetfulness of self, emulate the efforts of those who went out from us—John Williams, ofromsage, of John Waterhouse, John Hunt, Thomas Baker, and some still among us whose noblest work was done in the islands of the Pacific, and who have left the island missions. He was not inattentive to the fact that much had been done, and that much was being done, but he wished to point the way to something greater, to send their agencies still wider, to point with pride to the work of the missionaries of the United States, who again have the sickle of the reaper in India, China, and Japan. If they are faithful, the time will come when, in these three places, the Australasian would take its part with the Churches in proclaiming the message of the Gospel, and in the service of the world. The Church has many more. Its adherents number 225,000, and its contributions amount to about the sum of 60 p. per head per annum for the conversion of the world to Christ. In scanning the report he had noticed here frequently the sum of 20 p. per head per annum, and he had asked himself what that sum of small means; and some who want they had small means gave 21s., remain at the same figure now that they have become men of considerable wealth. He by no means despised the guinea, but he should be better pleased to receive 20 p. per head per annum, 25 p. or 30 p. per head per annum, than to receive 20 p. per head per annum at the rate of proportionate giving. He yielded to there would be abundance of means to carry on the work of the Church. The revered lecturer concluded with an eloquent appeal to the Church on the ground of privilege as well as of duty to support the cause of the world's redemption. He then sang "Hosanna to Christ" and the 74th Psalm.

On the motion of the Rev. GEORGE MARTIN, seconded by Mr. B. JAMES, jun., a vote of thanks was accorded by acclamation to Dr. C. W. Allen for his kindness, at some convenient time, in taking the chair, and the ability with which he had performed its duties.

The CHAIRMAN acknowledged the compliment, and proposed that the Rev. Dr. Kelynaak should be thanked for his very interesting and valuable and eloquent lecture—on the Resurrection which was responded to in real good earnest.

A collection was taken up, which, it was announced, with donations made before the meeting, amounted to £607 16s.

SYDNEY WOOL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—By the steamer Orient I have received from Mr. J. Fuhrmann, of Antwerp, a letter complaining of the condition in which his Sydney wool purchases were delivered in this port. He writes as follows:—"I regret that I must again complain of the packing and dumping, as also of the branding, of your goods. The bales, and especially those per earthenware, have been delivered in a most miserable condition. The wool is soiled and soiled in such a manner as to be lost, caused by the bad packing and dumping. The wool is lost. I beg to call again your special attention to the evil, and if it cannot be helped I cannot any longer import from Sydney. In other Australian ports the bales are packed, and the wool is not soiled, and I think that in your port they can do as well as in the other ones."

Thus writes Mr. Fuhrmann, who, as one of the largest wool buyers in Adelaide, Melbourne, and Sydney, during the season just over, has had every opportunity of installing a counterpane between the handwork of the three porters and the three ports.

On my return from Europe in September last I drew attention to this very question, and pointed out the mistake of woolgrowers and stovedores were making in not adopting the style of packing and dunnaging.

How is it that work of every kind in Sney is done in a more slovenly manner than in any other city in the world? can nothing be done to remove the reproach under which the port lies, and to change a system which repels, instead of attracting, fresh custom?

Perhaps you, Sir, or some of your readers, can suggest a remedy. I am, &c.

Sneyday, May 9. HENRY AUSTIN.

DEATH FROM STYKING DURING TOOTH EX-

SECTION.—In the December number of Johnson's Dental Scandelay is an account of the death of a patient from syncope following the attempted extraction of a molar tooth. The patient was a young man, who had been a patient of the dentist for some months, and a physician had to be sent for to extract the tooth, and the man could not be restored. The man then wished to have the operation completed, in spite of the contrary advice of the physician and the dentist. However, before the instrument could be introduced into his mouth he again fainted, and all efforts to restore him failed, and he died very shortly afterwards in the hospital, to which he had been removed. His case points very strongly to the conclusion that all operations (without anaesthetics) which produce fainting or syncope should be interrupted until a second visit, which may be so timed that the patient may be fortified either by breakfast or luncheon.—Lancet.

selection was declared void by the Privy Council, and nobody will now be disposed to think that in this case the law worked any hardship towards deserving poor men. However, though the case seems to have been a worthless one from the first, and the parties not deserving of the slightest commiseration, the Legislature was moved to grant compensation, and the sum of £1010 was ultimately granted. Of course this sum was made up of items. It included law expenses on both sides, refunds of what was paid to Government, and other outlays. Yet none of the members of the DAY family seem, according to their own evidence to have known how it was made up. Mr. GEORGE DAY, sen., the member of Parliament, who naturally, the evidence did not like to engineer a case in which his family name was concerned, and who got Mr. FARRELL to lit for him, did not know that the successful litigator's costs for which the defence was liable, were to be paid out of it. The valuable selector did not know, nor did his father. That their own costs were to be paid they knew very well, for the first thing done as soon as the money was received was for Mr. JAMES DAY, who received it, to pay Mr.

Y, NAGLE, his solicitor, £300. What was the balance for? The simple-minded people do not seem to have known. The valuable selector gave it all to his father, because his father had kept him for the last six years. It does not seem to have occurred to him to ask whether the Legislative Assembly, as the guardian of the public purse, was at all likely to have voted money for the keep for six years of such a eminently industrious and ornamental member of society. Nor does the father appear to have had any embarrassment in falling in with the view taken by his dutiful and affectionate, if somewhat burlesque, son. He too, has family obligations. He assigned his estate about three years ago, and his brother WILLIAM has kept him and his family since then. So he gave £250 to this brother, not troubled apparently by any doubts as to whether the Legislative Assembly intended to vote the money for such a purpose. Another £100 was in the hands of his son, a captain, which had since been lent to him, and it is to be presumed, the proceeds received. Within six days the money had all gone. When the MESSRS. ROBERTSON applied for their costs, there was no money available. Mr. FARNELL told Mr. DAV, M.L.A., most distinctly how the compensation money was made up, and that it included ROBERTSON'S costs; and the petition to Parliament, written by DAV, the father, and signed by DAV, the

8. sou, and presented by the uncle, the member, distinctly states that the amount to be put upon the Estimates was to be sufficient, among other things, to pay the law costs of both the plaintiff and the defendant. Yet, though there is this evidence—that the money was asked for, for this specific purpose among others—that the three DAYS were all separately parties to the petition that asked for it, and that it was distinctly stated that the vote responded to the request made, yet when the money came into possession, none of the members of the family seem to have understood its destination, and it was given by young Day to his father to pay for his keep, and by the father to a brother.

to pay for his keep. Now, if the DAYS are worth keeping at the public expense, their case should be put before Parliament on its merits. If they can make out a special

And this leads naturally to the question how Parliament is to protect itself against similar impositions for the future. With our present superabundance of money, we spend several million thousands foolishly, and no questions are asked. Still the country cannot relish the idea that it is being deliberately taken in. It will not like to have money voted for one purpose and appropriated to another; and it would like to see some means by which the Parliament and the Administration could be protected against such misappropriation. How is it to be done? It is quite clear that in the present case not a penny ought to have been granted, and that the Minister had not forfeited out the whole case. Parliament voted the money in ignorance, and it was paid away without due precautions that it should be rightly distributed. It is quite clear that for the future all these claims should be thoroughly scrutinized, and that if there is the slightest element of suspicion about them they should be probed to the very bottom. Friendly select committees are worse than useless as a help at getting at the truth. They are simply the form of an inquiry without this reality. The now to has had experience enough to warn it against a careless and easy-going adoption of reports from such committees, and the country will not hold the Assembly guiltless if, knowing how it has been imposed upon in the past, it submits to be made a tool of in the future.

The official abstract of the returns for the March quarter, issued from the New South Wales Treasury last Friday, supplies another proof of the exuberant material prosperity of the colony. The deposits have reached a total of £21,037,185. That surpasses the total of last December, the highest ever attained up to that date, and compared with the March quarter of 1881 it shows an increase of £2,800,450. The increase has been distributed between money at interest and money at call, but was largest under the latter head, and the non-interest bearing deposits held by the banks reached the high total of £8,804,412. The advances also have gone on increasing, not quite so fast as the deposits for the last quarter, but showing for the whole twelve-months an increase of £4,434,408. To meet this demand for money the banks have lent six and a-half millions of their non-interest bearing deposits; but apparently they are still sending their own capital out of the colony in search of investment, or to meet necessary payments, for their average employed within it the colony during last March quarter was £2,243,793 out of a total of £13,992,808 in paid-up capital and reserved profits. SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, TUESDAY.

The local directors of the Westport Coal Company interviewed the Government to-day, and asked that the tender for the supply of 28,000 tons of coal for railway purposes be altered so as to admit of the competition of the Westport Company. The Commissioner of Works, before promising to do anything, said he would like a sample to be tested by the engineer-in-chief. The directors promised to procure a sample. A deputation from Mounta then complained of misrepresentation by a former deputation, and declared that they were going to the Government to demand the Government to order the tender to be altered so as to admit of the competition of the Westport Company. The Commissioner of Lands said the tender had his sympathy, but he thought it best to let the police deal with the matter.

In the report of the annual session of the Diocesan Synod, which was read by the Rev. Canon Dean Russell, mentions that the Honoured clergy at present number 50. The first student had been admitted to St. Barnabas' Theological College. The report of the Dean suggested that steps be taken to send missionaries to the Chinese in the Northern Territory, and referred to the good work done by the Ladies' Friendly Society. The officers and other collections for the year aggregated £12,682, an increase of £900. Dean Russell suggested that the word "lord" be hereafter omitted from the designation of the bishop, as the late prelate was the last appointed by the Queen, and consequently was the last legally entitled to that title.

A warm discussion ensued, and the Dean's suggestion was negatived. A resolution was then passed that a discussion be held on the advisability of admitting women to vestry work, but it being found that the fundamental rules of the synod could not be altered in the absence of the bishop, the subject dropped.

In the course of the discussion on education, great regret was expressed at the apathy existing towards Sunday schools. A resolution was adopted that all other churches be requested to make strenuous efforts to bring about an improvement in this respect. Major Ferguson, in the course of a long speech, said that he believed not 50 per cent. of the children went to Sunday school, and not 20 per cent. had the Bible read to them at home.

PARLIAMENT OF VICTORIA.

(BY TELEGRAPH.)

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

In the Legislative Council, the Premier announced that he had presented a bill in reply to the Governor's speech, and read his Excellency's reply thereto. Mr. Deane moved that the House adjourn till Tuesday, to mark its sympathy with the British Ministry in the loss of two of its members by assassination, and to express the abhorrence felt by the Ministry and people of this colony of the assassination. The motion was agreed to.

In the Assembly, on the assembling of the House, Sir Bryan O'Loughlin, referring to the same matter, said he thought that everyone must regard it as a national calamity. (Hear, hear.) Both Houses in England had adjourned to mark their sense of the occurrence, and he suggested, as there was the only Australian Parliament now in session, the House should adjourn, in order to mark, on the part of the Australian people, its deep sense of the very grave nature of the crime, its abhorrence of the assassination, and its sympathy with the home Ministry, and respect for the memory of the deceased gentleman. Mr. Barry seconded the motion. He would have been glad if the Premier had proposed the appointment of a committee to inquire into the circumstances of the crime, but he was not only sympathetic with the Government and nation over these fearful and cowardly crimes, but also taking the right hon. gentleman and the great Liberal party in England not to allow the occurrence to interfere with the policy which had been inaugurated in Ireland, and answered by the Premier's motion, he thought that the House might take the opportunity to express its horror, not only of these particular assassinations, but of all the events which led up to it, and which made political assassination almost an ordinary every-day occurrence. He expressed a hope that the Premier would take steps for the appointment of a committee. Mr. Francis hastily supported the motion, but thought that the House should not be a permanent committee for the head of the Government to move for a committee. Mr. Patterson also supported the motion. The frequency of murders in Ireland showed the necessity of stamping out secret societies. This assassination would create an anti-Irish feeling throughout the empire. Mr. A. T. Clark warmly supported the motion, and said that he was sure that the House would be responsible for every crime, and thought it would be time enough to appoint a committee when the facts were known. Meanwhile they had no right to cast reflections on a nation nine-tenths of whose people were equally indignant. Sir John O'Shanassy spoke to a similar effect. After further discussion the motion was agreed to.

A serious railway collision occurred at Turlong, on the Maryborough line, to-day, by which six or seven persons were injured. A train from Maryborough had just arrived at the station, and was shunting on to a siding to allow a train from Ballarat to pass through, when the driver of the Maryborough train, seeing that a collision was imminent, reversed his engine, and endeavored to get back on the line, but was overtaken by the other train. A severe collision followed, smashing the buffers of the engine. The passengers were severely shaken and greatly alarmed. Three or four were seriously hurt, but none dangerously.
